

Notes Section 1

John Yang

November 10, 2021

Contents

7	Reflections on my trip(s) to various cities.....	1
7.1	Atlanta.....	1
7.2	Baltimore.....	2
7.3	Washington, D.C.....	3
7.4	Chicago.....	3
7.5	Cleveland.....	3
7.6	Boston.....	3
7.7	New York.....	3
7.8	San Francisco.....	3
7.9	Beijing.....	3
7.10	Yantai.....	3
7.11	Philadelphia.....	3
7.12	New Haven.....	3
7.13	Pittsburgh.....	3
7.14	Toronto.....	3
7.15	Montreal.....	3
7.16	Quebec City.....	3
7.17	Houston.....	3

7 Reflections on my trip(s) to various cities

7.1 Atlanta

- Basic Information
 - When did I go?
 - * 11/4/2021 (Thursday)
 - Who did I go with? Who did I meet/already know there?
 - * Traveled alone, but met up with Emily Hang at GT.
 - Why did I go? (What was the purpose of my trip?)
 - * College visit for Georgia Tech.
 - What did I do there?
 - * Flew into ATL. Had breakfast at Sun In My Belly restaurant. Went on a campus tour at GT. Visited Centennial Olympic Park, National Center for Civil and Human Rights. Walked around GT with Emily, then went back to ATL.
 - Where did I go, if it wasn't mentioned already?
 - * I also kinda walked around some of the residential areas around GT, as well as near the restaurant in Oakhurst.

- * Tried to go to the Delta Flight Museum but it was closed.
- Impressions
 - People:
 - * There were a lot of anti-maskers at GT, which was interesting. GT doesn't have a mask mandate because the University System of Georgia won't allow them to.
 - * People were pretty nice overall. How do I even judge the niceness of people?
 - Transit:
 - * I mainly took the MARTA subway to places, and I didn't really use the bus.
 - Climate:
 - * The weather was really bad that day - it was cold and rainy for most of the morning, but that's apparently as bad as it gets in Georgia.
 - Perceptions of the city's planning:
 - * The thing I was really annoyed about is how there's a literal interstate that runs through the center of the city. Many cities have rivers that separate different geographical locations. Atlanta doesn't have that, but they somehow decided to do it artificially by building a damn highway right through the middle of the city?? Make it make sense.
 - External POVs:
- Other information
 - Historical context:
 - * Obviously, the South had a lot of segregation and the effects have inertia.
 - Additional notes
 - * Whenever I visit a new city, if I have time, I like to try to go to the non-touristy areas to get a better sense of what the city is like. In Atlanta, I sort of achieved this by going to that breakfast restaurant that was not close to downtown at all. However, I could tell that I was in a probably more affluent neighborhood.
 - Final thoughts
 - * I really enjoyed my time in Atlanta, even though I was only there for a day and the weather was kinda nasty in the morning. Being able to ride local transit and go beyond the typical tourist attractions is always valuable to me, and I appreciated the glimpse into Atlanta's communities. I certainly did not get the sense at any point that it was unsafe or dangerous.

7.2 Baltimore

- Basic Information
 - When did I go?
 - * 11/5/2021 (Friday)
 - Who did I go with? Who did I meet/already know there?
 - * I was travelling alone, and I didn't really have people I knew in Baltimore except for my old coworker Charlotte, who I briefly met for a drink.
 - Why did I go? (What was the purpose of my trip?)
 - * I was visiting Johns Hopkins University.
 - What did I do there?
 - * Arrived late at night, chilled in the airport until the morning, where I then had breakfast at the Blue Moon Cafe. Then, I had my tour at JHU; had lunch at Bird in Hand Coffee, visited the Baltimore Museum of Art, had some boba with Charlotte, then moved on to DC.

- Where did I go, if it wasn't mentioned already?
 - * I spent a really long time in Penn Station bcs I didn't want to leave at 10 PM, also what was I even going to do at that hour anyway?

- Impressions

- People: The people were very nice. There seemed to be a good amount of diversity too.
- Transit: Baltimore is not a very rail-oriented city. Perhaps this is a result of them being so close to the water. There is only one subway line, and most of the transit comes in the form of buses. There are multiple bus types: cityLink buses are high frequency, high traffic routes and are color coded. localLink routes have stops closer together and are numbered, connecting the tangential segments of the city, whereas the cityLink buses are the radial segments [think of it like a giant polar coordinate system, where cityLink buses operate in the \vec{r} direction, while localLink buses operate in the $\vec{\theta}$ direction]. There are also free buses called Charm City Circulators, which have their own color coding system. Buses are harder for visitors to ride because you need to know where to get off using the pull cord/stop request. However, with tools like Google Maps, you just have to be very observant and things will be just fine.
- Climate: It was very cold this morning, but it warmed up significantly throughout the morning and early afternoon. Honestly, the weather was kinda beautiful - blue skies, very few clouds.
- Perceptions of the city's planning: It definitely didn't give
- External POVs:

- Other information

- Historical context
- Additional notes

7.3 Washington, D.C.

7.4 Chicago

7.5 Cleveland

7.6 Boston

7.7 New York

7.8 San Francisco

7.9 Beijing

7.10 Yantai

7.11 Philadelphia

7.12 New Haven

7.13 Pittsburgh

7.14 Toronto

7.15 Montreal

7.16 Quebec City

7.17 Houston